Town Fathers Hold Busy Council Meet.

Following is a record of the proceedings of the Council of the Town of Wainwright at its regular meeting in the council chamber at 8 o'clock p.m., Tuesday, June 2nd, 1936.

The members of Council present at the meeting were Mayor J. G. Middlemas and Councillors Huntington, Robinson, McLeod, Welch and Link.

The recorded proceedings of Council at its regular meeting of May 19th, were read and on motion by Coun. Robinson, were adopted and confirmed as written.

The account of the Central Alberta Sanatorium for $250.00 for hospital care of Pon Yee was ordered filed, on motion by Coun. Huntington.

A communication from Mr. J. A. MacKenzie in connection with the office of Town Solicitor was received and filed, on motion by Coun. Robinson.

The Maple Leaf Oil Company Ltd. wrote, replying to communications from the Secretary-Treasurer, not giving particulars desired by Council, and on motion by Coun. Link, the Secretary-Treasurer was instructed to write this company, requesting that the terms in this connection be outlined in a letter to the town.

The account for $127.50 from the Wainwright Municipal Hospital District for the hospital care of Elinor Abernethy was referred to the Town Solicitor for his opinion of the town's liability, on motion by Coun. Huntington.

Mr. J. A. MacKenzie, Town Solicitor, wrote, enclosing a communication from Mr. N. D. Maclean, K.C., with other correspondence in connection with gas negotiations, and asking instructions for his reply to Mr. Maclean, and on motion by Coun. Link, instructions of council will be transmitted to Mr. MacKenzie by Mayor Middlemas and Coun. Link.

The Special Relief Department of the city of Edmonton advised that Mrs. Myrtle Bowers had registered with that department on April 29th last and that certain relief had been issued for which the department would assume responsibility, and on motion by Coun. Welch, the Secretary-Treasurer was instructed to acknowledge this communication and advise the Special Relief Department that, in the opinion of this Council, had they properly investigated the dealings of Mrs. Bowers with the Provincial Bureau of Relief and Public Welfare, they would not have issued relief, and on these grounds, we refuse payment.

The Provincial Bureau of Relief and Public Welfare wrote further in connection with the liability of the Town of Wainwright for relief furnished to Mrs. Bowers by that department, and on motion by Coun. Welch, the Provincial Bureau of Relief and Public Welfare was notified that this Council are of opinion that we are not liable for the relief extended to Mrs. Bowers.

On motion by Coun. Huntington, the expense accounts of Coun. H. C. Mrs. M. L. Forster and her daughter Doris were visitors to the city at the week-end.

It was decided that the prize money for baseball and softball should not exceed $175.00 and that there be a senior baseball tournament restricted to the first four entries, and that there should be an intermediate level tournament also restricted to the first four entries.

Authority was given to Wm. Crowe to expend an amount not in excess of $60.00 for ground improvements and gatekeepers, policemen and cashier, etc., for the day.

It was decided that admission to grounds be 50c for adults. Parking for cars to be free and children attending school to be admitted free.

An amount not to exceed $110 was set to be expended for music and entertainment.

It was decided that an amount not to exceed $45.00 be allowed the Parade committee for expenditures including prizes and that the tickets be the same as last year, that is, each child to get two five-cent tickets.

On motion by Messrs. McBride and Stuart, it was decided that refreshment booths be charged $25.00 each and limited to two in number. If they want a building they should be charged $10.00. That each $25.00 concession holder be entitled to 4 passes. That the secretary be instructed to reply to letter from St. Thomas' W.A. accordingly. Small concession holders to be entitled to two passes.

"This race is the worst grueling test," declared Ken Tully, local Firestone representative, in commenting on this race. "So grueling is it that only 15 cars finished out of the 32 that started. We are very proud that Firestone Tires were on the winning cars again this year. For the past seventeen years all the winners have used Firestone tires."

In Meyer's opinion much of the credit for the new records in speed and fewer accidents is due to Firestone high speed tire developments. With the question of tire safety no longer a factor, driver's confidence and freedom from worry has greatly improved their driving ability and opportunities.

Committees Appointed for 1st July Celebration

A meeting of last year's Dominion Day Celebration Committee was called by Mayor-Middlemas in the Town Hall at 4.30 p.m. on Thursday last when those present were Mayor Middlemas and Messrs. C. W. McBride, J. W. Stuart, Wm. Crowe and W. J. Huntington.

The Mayor appointed the following chairman of the various committees and instructed them to select their own committee—Grounds, Mr. Wm. Crowe; Music, Mr. E. B. Huntington; Mr. W. J. Huntington; Sports, Mr. W. J. Stuart; and Parade, Mr. Chas. Horn.

IRMA WINS OPENING BASE BALL GAME

The lid was lifted off the 1936 ball season on Sunday last for the Wainwright ball team when they spotted to Irma, losing out in a close game 6-7.

The local ball team was somewhat changed around from the last few seasons, it being without the services of the two Robert's boys, Reg. and Russell Corfield and V. Gander, who were all making good on the various three-clubs at Power River, but the holes were filled and it looks as if a fair brand of ball will be dashed up to the fans.

Paul and C. Spornitz made up the battery for Wainwright, Paul allowing five hits, issued two free passes and struck out seven batters. Irma used two pitchers, R. Lukens starting and L. Vora going in to finish the game, Hawkett being on the receiving end.

Wainwright scored first in the third inning Donnelly getting a single and came in on a sacrifice. Right field, Lane being caught out trying to stretch it into a three-base hit. They increased their lead to two in the fifth inning V. Corfield getting on base with a single and scoring when E. Lane drove one past the second baseman. Irma put themselves in the lead in their turn to bat in the fifth inning by collecting three runs. With the bases loaded due to an error and two walks C. Lukens slammed out a three-base hit clearing the bases before him.

Wainwright came back in the seventh and took what looked like a commanding lead at this stage of the game by running in three runs. C. Spornitz, Donnelly and V. Corfield scored. Irma came right back and evened the count at 5-5, when Hawkett brought in two men with a timely three-base hit.

The eighth inning saw Irma go in to the lead again scoring two runs. R. Lane scored in the ninth for Wainwright, making the final score read 6-7 in Irma's favor.

"Barney" Buckle—impire. A return game will be played on the local diamond on Sunday next.

Little damage was done to the property at the Gold Standard refinery early on Monday morning by a slight outbreak of fire although Mr. Howard Pendergast received a pair of very badly burned hands for which he is a patient at the hospital.

To Visit Wainwright

Who for many years has rated as one of Canada's finest pianists, will come to Wainwright on June 20th to conduct the mid-summer examinations for the Toronto Conservatory of Music.

Before coming to Canada more than 20 years ago to join the faculty of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, Mr. Kihl was widely acclaimed in his native Denmark and throughout the Scandinavian countries as a concert artist. He has appeared on several occasions before huge audiences in the Royal Albert Hall and the Crystal Palace in London, and has made numerous European tours.

EDGERTON LAWYER PASSES AWAY

The district was shocked on Tuesday morning early in the week when Mr. Herbert Cameron Boyd, the well-known barrister, who for many years has practiced at Edgerton, passed away in the Wainwright hospital.

Mr. Boyd was taken suddenly ill on Saturday last, and was rushed to the hospital, but although everything possible was done to save life he passed peacefully away at the age of 68 years.

Born in Bombay, India, in June 1868, he went to Scotland with his parents, and was later educated at Aberdeen and Glasgow universities, attaining his M.A. and LL.B. degrees. After practicing law in Inverness, Scotland until 1912, he came to Canada with his wife, and settled in Edmonton, later going to Wetaskiwin, and in 1918 moved to Edgerton where he has since resided.

For many years he was an ardent advocate of the economic policy of Major C. H. Douglas and was an active worker in the last provincial campaign.

Surviving are his widow and two sons, Hugh and Ewan (Vancouver), and one daughter, Sheila, in addition to two brothers (Rev. Arnold Boyd, Rosyth, Scotland and Dr. W. Boyd, of Winnipeg) and one sister Miss Winifred Boyd, of Edinburgh, Scotland.

Farm Women's Week and Alumni Reunion

Applications are already coming in to the School of Agriculture, Vermilion, for Farm Women's Week, which will be held at the School from July 7th to July 10th. A very interesting and varied programme has been arranged for the Short Course and those who attend will not only have a profitable but a very enjoyable and pleasant few days at the school. A nominal fee of $1.00 per day is being charged and we are looking forward to a real enrolment this year.

We are appealing to all students of the V.S.A. to make every effort to bring their mothers in for this course so that they may enjoy attending classes in the same old classrooms. The course, however, is for all and all are cordially invited to attend. Don't forget the date—July 7th to 10th, inclusive!

A general reunion of the V.S.A. Alumni Association will be held on July 17th, 18th and 19th. Last year 250 ex-students attended this meeting. At that time it was felt by many of the students that there was not enough time for class reunion and consequently the time has been extended to two days.

Sweet are the uses of Adver"sity"tising

Men who carp at advertising do so under electric light, using fountain pens or typewriters, bathed in porcelain bathtubs, shaved with safety razors, riding in automobiles—and all these things would be inaccessible to them but for the advertising which they decry.

Indeed, in all probability, the salaries with which they buy these conveniences are made possible largely through advertising; for without it there could be neither mass production nor its low prices nor the jobs which it creates. Without advertising, most of the things which we regard as necessities would be the luxuries of the rich.

When Emerson made his famous remark about mouse-traps, it was illegal—so authorities say—to take a bath in the United States without a doctor's prescription. Emerson said, you remember, that if a man made the best mouse-trap, though he lived in the midst of a forest, the world would beat a pathway to his door.

This might have been true if he had said "village" instead of "world;" for it is highly improbable that, if a mouse-trap maker lived in Nova Scotia, a resident of British Columbia would tread the forest pathway though his house were over-run with mice. He would be forced to go on using inferior mouse-traps—even making his own—and suffering inconvenience and loss to the extent that his mouse-traps were inferior. He might not even realize that his mouse-traps were inferior until advertising enlightened him.

Advertising associations have a right to use a torch on their crest for advertising does enlighten. Advertising enlightens regarding those things which affect everyday life; not murders and catastrophes, but washings and radios, and the thousand and one other conveniences which make it possible for ordinary people to live spaciouly, enjoying the benefits of science and the enterprise of industry. And as yet there has been no other way devised under heaven by which this information can be conveyed.

And Advertising not only informs people as to what can be bought for health, comfort and entertainment, it also helps to place the commodities within the scope of the common-place pocketbook. Without Advertising Emerson's mouse-trap maker would be compelled to go on making his traps by hand and charging accordingly. The British firm of Lyons, for instance, sold ten thousand Swiss rolls weekly at a shilling each until through Advertising they were able to increase consumption sixty-fold, and to reduce the price to eightpence and two-thirds.

Advertising also guarantees fair deals; for if a man is fool enough to popularise an inferior product, he is merely spending his money to ripen a harvest of sales for someone else. The penalties of fraudulent advertising were illustrated with dramatic swiftness by Thomas Cromwell. He showed Henry VIII, the falsely-flattering picture of Anne of Cleves. She failed to satisfy Henry and Cromwell lost his head!

Nor is advertising a modern invention. The walls of Pompeii carried posters. Tradesmen sent criers through the streets of ancient Greece. It is the media of advertising which are new. When the world was without means of communication or distribution merchants must needs peddle their wares expensively and dangerously; when the supply exceeded the local demand. We should hardly be satisfied to pay for such costs and hazards. Today advertising enables us to seek and find the luxuries and refinements of life in the corner store, or to order them through the mail though we live in the depth of the country.

Advertising is an inherent characteristic of man; and it will continue as long as any man has anything or any theory to offer for the assistance of his fellows in their pursuit of happiness. Advertisers need not be ashamed of their part in making life richer, fuller, freer, nor of saving others from the necessity of beating pathways through forests to find the best mouse-trap.

For such reasons it is incumbent upon the merchants of Wainwright and District to advertise their wares to the fullest extent—and to do so in the most efficient and least costly manner—by regularly using the columns of the

Gang Warfare 1935

(Condensed from The Nation for Reader's Digest)

Way back last March police found the murdered body of Sam Druckenman in a Brooklyn garage. Druckenman was a bode who had gone to the loan sharks for $10,000 when he lost bets on the horses. When he was unable to pay his obligation, the loan sharks said, "Get it—or else."

Druckenman was able to beg, borrow or steal only $3,000. So the "or else" was accomplished, but not with the customary neatness and dispatch, for some passer-by heard his screams when he was being given the works—including burning the soles of his feet with lighted candles—and the police cars came screeching. The boys who had just tortured him to death were caught red-handed. Whereupon the loan-shark big shots went into action in a hurry. One of them phoned their financial backer.

"We got to have one hundred thousand grand right away to square a burning rap," he whispered to the backer, a supposedly reputable Brooklyn business man. This business man, with about a million dollars in cash, had decided that the loan-shark business would double his money in a short while. He was right for he received regular weekly payments with high interest rates on all loans. When he was asked to cough up $100,000 to square the murder rap, he grudgingly paid it but it gave him food for thought.

The case was hushed neatly with the $100,000—a detective confessed later to his superiors when this slaying became a cause celebre in Brooklyn politics, that $100,000 was offered for a ten-way split. But in the Druckenman murder case the answer to the question, "Why did they kill Dutch Schultz?"

After the backer of the loan-sharks was forced to part with $100,000 hush money he tried to free himself from the clutches of the murderous racketeers. Chief among his clients were the Amberg brothers—Oscar, Joe and Louis. Louis controlled the newly founded big-scale money-lending racket. He was doing nicely, thank you, by lending at rates of interest ranging from 100 to 1000 per cent. Joe Amberg controlled the white-collar and white-coat laundry racket, exacting his tithe from cleaners, bartenders, butchers, cafeteria workers, and so on.

When you use a blackjack to impress on the debtor the urgency of repaying, it is easy to collect. This principle impressed Schultz. It looked like even easier money than the policy-game racket and it sounded almost respectable—like being a banker. Schultz talked the three Amberg brothers into his right-hand helper, "Bo" thought it sounded good too, and started a few inquiries which led to the big business man in Brooklyn, who was looking for an out in his entanglements with the Amberg racketeers.

"Look here," "Bo" told the gentlemen, "Schultz can make you a better proposition than the Amberg and you won't have any more headaches. We'll give you a more generous cut-in for the use of your money. We're going to operate big in New York so that Louis Amberg will look like a punk." "O.K.," the business man said, and handed Weinberg $100,000 to seal the bargain. "I'll tell Louis I'm pulling out from his mob," then Schultz sent Frank Dolak and Benjamin Holinsky into Brooklyn to start a rival "Shylock" office.

When Louis learned that his money man was being stolen from him, he told Dolak and Holinsky, "You better tell Schultz to keep his nose out of here." The Schultz henchmen reported the conversation. Schultz felt a slight tremor, for Weinberg had been mysteriously missing for several days. Could it be possible the Ambergs had done away with him—maybe sealed him up in a barrel of wet cement, waited for it to dry and dumped him in the river? Well, he wouldn't back down for a bunch of punks. He'd muscle in and stick it.

"You go back with music and flags," Schultz ordered. A few days later the bodies of Dolak and Holinsky were found riddled with bullets, and the Ambergs were thereby credited with two notches in the guns they had trained on Schultz. Schultz immediately had a heart-to-heart talk with several members of the former Coli and Rao gangs. 13 days later hired killers got Joe Amberg.

Joe and his chauffeur were having a bite to eat before driving to the golf links, when Joe received a phone call to come over to Manhattan and pick up a couple of thousand which had just been paid off by a man who had been suspected of holding out on the moneylenders. That pleased Joe. He'd run over to New York for a few minutes and then go to the links. His big La Salle with the bullet-proof body was in a nearby garage. When Joe and the chauffeur entered the garage, three men stood them against the wall and let them have it.

Schultz gave his short, snoring laugh when he heard the job had been done. When Frankie Teitelbaum, bossman pal of the dead Joe, heard the tidings he vowed his revenge and made no secret of his intentions. He gave his watch, set with 79 diamonds, to Louis Amberg to keep for him, "I may not come back alive," he said, although he was pretty sure that his automatic would bark first. But eleven days later they got Frankie and Tony didn't treat him very nicely.

A girl friend suggested a drink in a nearby hotel. There an "entertainment" committee met Frankie. The boys hacked away at him with a small sharp ax while telling two funny stories and then stuffed his body into a trunk which went down the freight elevator of the hotel. The trunk was loaded on a small truck and near the Brooklyn Bridge the driver pushed the trunk off into the street and sped away. When the trunk was opened, Frankie's body was still warm. Schultz chuckled. He'd show these punks what made him overlord of Manhattan and the Bronx.

Louis, when he heard of the deed, didn't like it. So Schultz was really going to get tough! All right, he'd show him how tough an Amberg could be. He made a proposition to a well-known Paterson, N.J. mob boss, near the Brooklyn Bridge, to make a thickish packet of $100 bills. "I want Schultz rubbed out and as many of his mob as you can get," Louis said.

"O.K.," he was assured. "We'd do it for nuttin'. We don't like him anyway. But who'll put the finger on Schultz? He ain't showing himself these days where we can get at him and make an easy getaway."

"I'll attend to the details," said Louis. He went to work right away, too, and soon had the date and place of Schultz's execution in the bag. Meanwhile Schultz wasn't asleep. He had already arranged with his boys to put Louis out of the way. Louis went to keep a tryst with a friendly moll who had been compelled to make a telephone call with an automatic pressed to her side. Two well-dressed young men picked him up for a little talk and he knew he was through. They took him to the same hotel used for the other "conferences" with Frankie Teitelbaum. They went about their work in cold blood. With a small Boy Scout ax they beat a tattoo on his head, inflicting over a dozen deep cuts; they hacked at his body and watched the blood drip from his wounds. They bound blankets around the nude body dripping blood, and took it down the freight elevator. They placed him in a car and near the Brooklyn Navy Yard poured gasoline over the shackled body and set fire to it. The charred body was found after residents called the firemen. The fingerprints identified it.

In the meantime the Paterson mob felt it a solemn duty to get Schultz even if Louis was dead. Louis was dead, but their $50,000 fee, besides Schultz was making his headquarters in their territory and giving the place a bad name. New York punks, they opined, ought to stay in their own back yards.

So two men with hats pulled down over their eyes entered the chop house where Schultz and some of his men were conferring. They drilled Schultz's three henchmen with shots and then shot Schultz through the abdomen. They didn't kill him or his pals instantly, but left them mortally wounded to suffer a while and ponder their part. In Times Square during the theater rush several Harlem boys shot Marty Kromp, who was on Schultz's books as a lieutenant at $1500 a week, as he emerged from a barber-shop. His pal, Sam Gold, a cheap bookie who loved to associate with big shots, was also riddled. They both recovered.

The boys in the know insist that "Bo" Weinberg, last of the Schultz hierarchy, also went out of a hotel room. They say he was carried out in an undertaker's casket, and taken to a garage where there is a big shallow tank. There "Bo's" body lies in a lye solution. In a couple of months not even his teeth will be recognizable. At least that's what the boys are saying. But that's only hearsay.

MAY CLOSE U.C. COLLEGE

Holding strongly that St. Stephen's college should be continued as a theological training school on the campus of the University of Alberta, the United church conference in session at Robertson church Saturday passed a resolution to that effect, which will be passed on to the general council.

A commission appointed by the general council of the church to study the theological colleges throughout the dominion is expected to report in favor of closing two or more colleges with the probability of St. Stephen's being discontinued.

Principal A. S. Tuttle said that the reason behind this action is mainly one of finance, the closures to be urged for purposes of economy.

SPINACH . . . takes a rap. Some people eat spinach because they like it, but most children eat it because their parents have been told that it is good for them. Now comes along Dr. Clifford Sweet, a California child specialist, and tells the American Medical Association that spinach isn't any better food for children than any other green vegetable. He also ridicules the common idea that everybody requires a completely balanced diet at every meal.

I think most of the diet faddists have thrown away the most important ingredient, which is common sense. If all the nonsense that is talked about malnutrition were true, few of us would ever have lived to grow up. But I imagine it will be a long time before mothers generally will get rid of the notion that a fat baby is a healthy baby—or, for that matter, that they can keep themselves slender and well nourished at the same time.

DOUGHNUTS . . . over there. They had a celebration in New York the other day in honor of Helen Purviance, the Salvation Army lassie who fried the first doughnuts in France for the boys of the A.E.F. in 1917.

I would hesitate to say that the Salvation Army doughnuts won the war, but they certainly helped a lot in keeping up the morale of the American soldiers "over there." And they put the Salvation Army into first place in the affections of millions of Americans.

I don't know which I admire more, doughnuts or the Salvation Army. I am an enthusiast about both. I have to restrain my appetite for doughnuts as I grow older, but I find it impossible to refrain my admiration for the self-sacrificing labors of the Salvation Army. When I meet, as I often do, young men and women who have left wealthy homes or good jobs to help the Salvationists uniforms in order to help others, I always feel that these folks have found what Buddhists call "The Way of Life."

METHODISTS . . . polley. Through the union of its three great branches, the Methodist Church is about to become the largest Protestant denomination in America. In its recent general conference the Methodist Episcopal Church went deeply into the question of the attitude which the church should take on economic and political questions. A strong element favored advocacy of a planned social economy, but the decision of the conference was for freedom under democracy.

In the language in which the conference report proclaimed that "a free church cannot long survive the death of the free school, the free press, free speech and free assembly. We will resist dictatorship. Economic justice is to be won by extending democracy to the industrial order, not by setting up therein the autocracy of dictatorship." It seems to me that the Methodists have fully grasped and clearly expressed the essentials of Americanism.

FREEDOM . . . fair chance. The American system is based upon the freedom of the individual to plan his own life. That does not mean that society should not give him every possible aid, through school and church, to help the individual to fit himself for the struggle for existence. It does imply, however, that no child should be taught to believe that life is anything but a struggle, or that society owes him anything but a fair chance to make the best of whatever is in him. That is a hard doctrine from the point of view of the sentimentalist. But the hard way, what Theodore Roosevelt called "the strenuous life," is the only way of life in which the individual is free. It is not too high a price to pay for liberty.

PURITANS . . . standards. My friend, W. J. Cameron, in one of his Sunday night broadcasts, gave me a new thought on the character of the early colonists of New England. As one of the thirty million descendants of those 20,000 Puritans who settled in New England before 1640, I was interested when Mr. Cameron pointed out that in their time, and judged by the standards then prevailing in England, they were regarded as dangerous radicals. They were so far ahead of current ideas in their liberal attitude toward life and human affairs.

That is quite contrary to the current impression of our Puritan forefathers as narrow and hidebound. The world has moved in 300 years, and we cannot apply today's standards to the people of those times. But they did have one quality which measures up to the highest standards of all time. That was respect for the rights and liberties of individuals and suspicion of everyone who tried to get along without working.

When the German Emperor visited Pope Leo XIII, Count Bismarck tried to follow into the audience chamber. A gentleman of the Papal Court motioned him to stand back, as there must be no third person at the interview. "I am Count Herbert Bismarck," shouted the German, as he struggled to follow his master. "That," replied the Roman with calm dignity, "accounts for, but does not excuse, your conduct."

The Duke of Wellington, at the height of his fame, was walking down Piccadilly when a gentleman came up, took off his hat, and said, "Mr. Brown, I believe." The Duke's answer was simple and direct. It was: "Sir, if you believe that you'll believe anything."—Times.

CUTWORM SERIOUS ENEMY IN GARDEN

From the viewpoint of the gardener and the vegetable grower, cutworms are among the most important insects to be combated. They do an immense amount of damage especially in the spring and early summer when the plants are young.

Most cutworms are nocturnal in habit, hiding in the soil by day and emerging in the evening to feast upon their favourite kind of plant.

Cutworms are widely distributed throughout the Dominion.

Under garden conditions, cutworms can be controlled by a poisoned bait which is broadcast over the soil either before the seeds are planted or prior to the setting out of the young plants. The bait is composed of the following ingredients—bran, 20 pounds; molasses, 1 quart; paris green, 1/2 pound; and water about 2 1/2 gallons. The dry ingredients should be mixed thoroughly first of all. The molasses is then stirred into the water and this solution added to the bran and the paris green. In mixing the bait, add only enough water to make the material the consistency of wet sawdust. It must not be made sloppy, but so that it will crumble in the hands and slip through the fingers easily.

In the Prairie Provinces the bait should be spread after seeding but before any plants are up. In the case of transplanted seedlings the bait should be applied two or three days prior to the setting of the plants. Furthermore the ground to be treated should first be watered but allowed to warm up again before the poisoned bran is broadcast.

DAMAGED EARS CURB CATTLE PROFITS

In accordance with regulations, all Canadian cattle destined to Great Britain are tagged in the right ear with a metal tag bearing the letter "C" and a serial number after the animals have been passed as fit by the veterinary authorities. However, it would appear that prior to this inspection, the ears of some of the cattle bear marks of disfigurement which depreciate the selling value of the animals. According to advice received by the Live Stock Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture from the Canadian Government Animal Products Trade Commissioner in London, England, the selling price of Canadian cattle shipped as "stores" may be reduced at least $10 per head when their right ears show damage from tears, frost bite, punch marks, and other defects.

After the required period on feed in Great Britain Canadian cattle with right ears so disfigured may not be eligible for the subsidy paid by the British Ministry of Agriculture on cattle yielding 54 per cent of beef carcasses. As a result, the buyers discount the price by at least the $10 mentioned. It is pointed out also, that British cattle auctioneers are showing anxiety about the effect on prices generally if there is doubt as to the farmers as to the possibility of getting cattle that will not qualify for the subsidy.

A recent shipment of cattle from Canada to Great Britain contained 70 head which sold at about $10 per head discount because of damaged ears. Probably the entire profit from the sale was lost through this preventable condition. Officials of the Live Stock Branch explain that it would be better for Canadian farmers to sell such cattle on the domestic market, and observe that, as the British market is a strong factor in the maintenance of cattle prices in Canada, farmers and shippers will no doubt in future guard against this unfavourable condition, which directly affects their revenues from live stock.

THIRTY-MILE DRIVER

THE SAFEST ON ROAD

Now that the roads are drying up and the air is becoming warmer and motorists are on the highways in greater numbers a word of advice may be worth while. It is drive carefully—it may save a life and it will save cash. To use a "pocket book argument" quoted by the Northern News, Kirkland Lake, "the United States Bureau of Standards tests indicate that the 30-mile-an-hour driver is the wise driver from the point of view of the pocketbook as well as the human point of view. Such a careful driver averages 18 miles to the gallon at 30 miles an hour, while at 60 miles an hour he would only average 12.6 miles to the gallon, and at 80 only 8.6. His oil bill is also lower at a lower speed. Recent tests by the contest board of the American Automobile Association at the Indianapolis Speedway proved that a vehicle travelling at 55 miles an hour consumes 6.9 times as much oil as it does at 30 miles an hour. To reach this conclusion more than 600,000 calculations were made.

over a period of 24 days with 13 makes of cars, each of which covered 9,000 miles."

But above all, careful driving may save fatalities and injury. Stop, read and act accordingly.

MODERN WOMEN

CHARL ORMOND WILLIAMS
President of National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc.

"If we are ever to make America a rich, vital and humane civilization, women will have to help and often take the lead," we are told by Stuart Chase. He also says that we must refuse to be diverted by high, misty principles. We must exert the practical, humanitarian sense which God gave us more generously than He bestowed upon men. We must work with single-mindedness for those measures which promise to make thirty million homes comfortable, decent and secure places in which to live.

In Milburn, N. J., Miss Clare Hires is making plants grow in sealed bottles in a colorless jelly. She makes them grow better than they could possibly thrive in a greenhouse or garden. She gets practically 100% germination and has saved many rare plants from extinction. Harvard has a stock of her bottled specimens for study purposes. Miss Hires learned from Dr. Lewis Knudson at Cornell how to raise orchids in sterile glass containers. It took her four years to work out a perfect formula for growing plants in this way.

Dr. Lela E. Fisher of the chemistry department of Columbia University, has succeeded in extracting a highly concentrated form of vitamin H, found in wheat, rice, pellings and in certain cereals. It is considered an important factor in the prevention of pellagra.

Mary Hooper, aged eleven, is the youngest diving queen this country has ever had. She was trained by her mother. Her sisters are excellent swimmers, too. Mary won the title of national woman's diving champion last summer.

FIRST INSTALLMENT

Silas Spelle gripped his black stogie more firmly between his yellow teeth and leaning across Ed Starbuck's desk, pounded a huge fist upon the oaken top to add emphasis to his words.

"By God, yuh've got to do something, Starbuck," he snapped harshly. "Yuh know and I know and everybody else knows yore damned bank is on the verge of going under. Yuh couldn't pay off yore depositors now, not four-bits on the dollar. I'm offerin' yuh a fair proposition. As I told yuh before I'll buy up the mortgages yuh hold and I'll pay every cent yuh loaned on them plus interest to date. That's a damn good offer—yuh know it is."

"Perhaps," replied Starbuck quietly. "But it ain't enough, Spelle. Those mortgages represent more than just collateral to me. They represent faith—faith in me and my bank by the men who gave them. In time they'll all be taken up. Present conditions won't last forever. The price of beef is beginning to climb. The drought is broken. No Spelle, yuh or no other man has got enough money to tempt me to double-cross my friends."

"Faith—faith hell," snorted Spelle. "Yuh'll starve to death while yuh're rantin' about faith. Yuh're a hell of an excuse of a business man. Yuh better consider my proposition, Starbuck. If I have to tip off the bank examiner in Westhaven he'll put the skids under yuh pronto. But I don't want to do that. My offer stands. I want to think it over. I'll be back then."

Spelle stood up, a big, thick-set man whose loose, thick lips and close set eyes mirrored plain the consuming passion of his life. Greed! Greed and selfishness.

"Remember," he bit out, stepping to the door of Starbuck's office. "By this time next week I'll expect yuh to get back to common sense. If yuh won't talk turkey then why—"

He finished with a significant gesture which consisted of holding out one grimy, hairy hand then closing it as though to crush whatever lay within it.

"Wait!"

Ed Starbuck was now on his feet, a tall, gaunt, leathery faced man, whose drooping, lanky nose and bracketed a pair of grim, tight lips. Beneath his faded, bushy eyebrows his eyes looked out clear and blue and cold. His left sleeve hung empty for the arm was off at the shoulder, a reminder of an old rustling war when he himself had been a cattleman. But the lean right hand was sound and with it he lifted a heavy, worn Colt revolver from the drawer of his desk and laid it on the scarred surface before him.

"Yuh've had yuh say, Spelle," he drawled, his words dripping contempt and scorn. "Now I'll have mine. What I just told yuh stands, this week, next week or any, other week. Yore damned money ain't worth hell room in this bank. Faith—no, yuh don't know the meaning of the word. Greed is yore war-cry."

"Thick blood congested Spelle's beefy features. His lips parted in a snarl. He tried to match looks, but failed. Those icy blue eyes of the villainous old banker seemed like live flames and the implacable courage behind them was unmistakable. Spelle cursed venomously and left."

Ed Starbuck stood for a long time after Spelle had gone. The fire in his eyes slowly faded and hopelessness took its place. He sank back into his chair like an old man who was suddenly very weary. Ed Starbuck had always been a man who faced facts squarely, regardless of what those facts might be. He faced them now. Spelle had told the truth. The Cattleman's Bank of Carillon was on the narrow edge. True, Starbuck held mortgages that would more than put him on his feet should he sell them out. But this, according to Starbuck's standards, would be breaking faith with men he had known all his life and who trusted him. Still he had to have money—cash. There was only one thing to do. He would ride around to the different cattle outfits and put his problem squarely up to the owners. They all stood to stand, or fall together. If they could somehow help his bank to weather through they would have Spelle whipped. If they didn't—Starbuck sighed, reached for his hat and went out into the street.

The little cowtown of Carillon was drowning in the heat of mid-afternoon. The single, dusty street lay white and glaring in the sun, and was deserted save for a barefoot Mexican or two and a pair of cowboys slouching at the hitching rail before Jake Butterfield's Emporium. Starbuck angled across the street towards the livery stable and corral at the northern end of town. A few moments later he emerged from the livery stable, leading a saddle horse. He swung into the saddle and headed south along the street. As he did so two punchers clanked out of Butterfield's and forked the dry, torrid summer months. As for the other smaller ranchers, they also would sink if Starbuck's bank went under. But Spelle gave them little thought. Small fry, he told himself, contemptuously.

There was another motive to Silas Spelle's hatred of San Juan Delevan. It dated back many years. It began the day Martha Wingate had married Delevan after scorning Spelle's advances. Her death, three years after the marriage, when she gave her life to bring a baby gaughson's body rested on a mane of silvery hair. One of the real old-timers, decided Starbuck.

The other rider was young, somewhere in his early twenties. Well set up, with flat muscled, powerful shoulders. His face was smooth and tanned, his eyes blue, his hair curly and brown. Gay, sparkling youth lay over him like a mantle. A clean, lusty, carefree kid, in love with life and hungering for all its wonders. Their clothes were those of the range, worn but substantial. Both carried a heavy gun, slung at the right hip.

The elder of the two nodded to Starbuck.

"Howdy," he drawled. "Wonder could yuh show us the trail to the Box D outfit? Cent back in the store told us mebbe they could use a couple of hands out there."

"Sure," replied Starbuck. "Glad to. Fact is I'm riding out there myself. Glad to have your company."

"Yuh ain't San Juan Delevan by any chance?"

"No. I'm Ed Starbuck. I own the Cattleman's Bank back in town."

"Shore I'm glad to know yuh. I'm Tex Whipple. This chuckle-headed cub is Johnny Dehoo. Kid, shake hands with Mister Starbuck."

Introductions over, the three jogged steadily south. Tex and Starbuck rode side by side while Johnny brought up the rear, gazing with lazy eyes over the heat shimmering sage.

"That big plateau straight ahead is the Box D range," said Starbuck presently. "One of the finest holdings in the country. Lots of water, fine pasture and a stand of pine trees what gives the lie to this damned desert. I shore envy ole San Juan Delevan, livin' up among those cool trees."

"Runs a pretty good spread, does he?" asked Tex.

"Yeah. Ordinarily, it's A-1. He's had some hard luck lately though. Two months ago he was driven a thousand head of prime Herefords across the upper end of the Kanab Desert to the shippin' pens at Sawtelle an' they sprung a stampede. Twen the desert and some rustlers he lost better'n eight hundred head. It was a damn heavy job. They was prime stock, the pick of his herd. Then he got his spine hurt in the stampede besides. Hoss tripped an' throw him. Doc says he's due to sit side for nothin'."

"Can't say as to that. Punched ter into the world caused Spelle to go. What he could not have himself, he wanted no other man to hold. And he had never forgiven Delevan for winning the woman he himself had set his heart on."

The lamp in Spelle's office glowed yellow. In its light Spelle was like a bloated poisonous thing, intent upon his plotting. The night wind mourned about the silent ranchhouse. Once or twice the windows rattled. A dim form stole from the darkness outside and crossed the patio. The side door to Spelle's office swung slowly back. The flame of the lamp wavered and flickered. Spelle turned. His face blanched and his jaw dropped slightly. Fear lay stark in his eyes. He was like a man gazing upon a ghost. He ran a thick tongue over his lips.

"Yuh!" he croaked harshly. "The papers said yuh were dead. They found yore body around the place along the track of the S.W. & P."

"Yeah," snarled the newcomer. "They think they did. I out-faced them, that's all. What they found was a damned hobo with my prison clothes on him. Well—don't sit staring at me like I was a ghost. I'm real—damned real. Why don't yuh greet yore long lost son like a father should?"

"Yuh're no son of mine," rasped Spelle hoarsely. "I—"

"On yes I am," cut in the other. "Not accordin' to law mebbe, but like the highbrows say—I'm a natural son. Not that I'm proud of my parents. My mother a Ute squaw—my father a damned crooked skunk what would betray his own flesh and blood. I came back—I told yuh I would, yuh unbelieve hypocrite. I didn't ask to come into the world. God knows. Yuh're responsible for me and by God yuh're gonna take care of me. I want food and I want whiskey an' a bunk to sleep in."

Spelle paled at the words and the manner of his illegitimate half-breed son. When he had read of that son's escape from the State Penitentiary road-gang attack terror had struck him. Then when another dispatch came through that his

"Yuh!" he croaked harshly. "The papers said yuh were dead" in a wheel chair for the rest of his days.

"Shore that's tough," nodded Tex. "Mebbe the kid and me'll have our do a lot of driftin' this time of year. Delevan may be able to use yuh."

It was a deep game Spelle was playing. His determination to smash Ed Starbuck was only a step towards the fulfillment of a long thwarted hate. Spelle's real objective was that immense expanse of valuable plateau range controlled by San Juan Delevan. There lay the water and grazing which Spelle could find good use for during the dry, torrid summer months. As for the other smaller ranchers, they also would sink if Starbuck's bank went under. But Spelle gave them little thought. Small fry, he told himself, contemptuously.

There was another motive to Silas Spelle's hatred of San Juan Delevan. It dated back many years. It began the day Martha Wingate had married Delevan after scorning Spelle's advances. Her death, three years after the marriage, when she gave her life to bring a baby gaugh-

Hints for the Household

Conducted By Betty Barclay

SETTING THE TABLE

Most informal dinners are of a casual nature as the guests are usually close friends or members of the family, and the table setting should reflect this casual, friendly atmosphere.

In setting the table the first thing to consider is the linen. Nothing is quite as correct as a white damask cloth. You will, of course, have the napkins to match which will be folded oblong and placed at the extreme left of the plate with the fold towards the plate.

A centerpiece containing fresh flowers is the most attractive centre. Candelsticks and compots can be eliminated if the hostess so desires, their use is optional for an informal dinner.

Next arrange the silver flatware. The knives belong at the right with the cutting edge toward the damask cloth. The spoons are placed at the right beside the knives, and the forks at the left. They are all arranged on an even line about an inch from the edge of the table. Place the first piece of silver to be used the furthest away from the plate, as you always start at the outside and work in towards the plate.

Bread and butter plates and butter spreaders will be used on the informal dinner table, the plates being placed at the top of the forks, with the spreader placed across the top of the plate.

There should be a pair of salts and peppers for each two guests and they should be placed where two persons may reach them without having to ask for them. The water goblet will be placed to the right at the top of the knives.

No food is put on the table except the decorating dishes of nuts, canyos and fruits.

General Hints
Guests should only be seated before the first course is served when that course is something which must be served hot.

To be generally correct serve your

SALAD AFTER THE MAIN COURSE

When you serve a salad of hearts and lettuce it is much nicer and much easier to use a knife as well as the fork. There is a knife made for this purpose.

A soft roll should always be broken open with your fingers and a hard roll slit slightly with your knife and then broken open with your fingers.

Bread and butter plates should be removed after the salad has been served and just before the dessert is served. Salts and peppers should be removed at the same time.

The hostess should not rise to remove the plates until everyone has finished the course. The plates, of course, are never stacked—they are carried singly—one in each hand. All the plates are removed before the next course is served. It is the duty of the host to carry on conversation in the interval between courses, as this makes serving much easier for the hostess.

It is customary to serve the hostess first, then the guest seated at her right.

SUMMER NUISANCES OF THE HOUSEHOLD

During the summer season insects of various kinds that occur in dwellings are a greater nuisance than at other times of the year. This is especially true of those destructive pests the clothes moths and carpet beetles which thrive best and develop most rapidly in a moist, warm atmosphere. Furs, woollens, and other fabrics of animal origin may be badly damaged if not properly protected. Valuable furs should be placed in cold storage, or after beating and brushing in the sunlight should be hung in moth proof bags with a liberal quantity of naphthalene flakes. Winter overcoats, other garments and blankets, may be protected in a similar manner, or may be wrapped in a paper with naphthalene and stored in trunks or boxes.

When house cleaning, cupboards, attics and basements should be examined and all materials removed in which the moths and beetle larvae may breed. Places that harbour dust and lint such as floor cracks behind baseboards, furnace air shafts and similar situations need special attention, as it is frequently in these places that the insects multiply, and mystify the housewife when they appear on the wing. A vacuum cleaner is very useful in eliminating this source of infestation.

Frequent and thorough house cleaning is an effective preventive against many other insects as well as clothes moths and carpet beetles. Cat and dog fleas, for instance, the larvae which feed on organic matter in the cracks and crevices of floors cannot develop where floors are kept scrupulously clean. The animals, too, should be washed, or treated at intervals by dusting fresh pyrethrum powder into their fur over newspapers, afterwards wrapping the papers and burning them to destroy any fleas that may have fallen from their hosts stunned by the insecticide.

This Week in Washington

In its decision declaring the Guffey Bituminous Control Law unconstitutional, the Supreme Court of the United States followed in the main the same line of reasoning which led to the death of NRA. The grounds for throwing out both of these acts, NRA and the Guffey Coal Act, are that the production of coal, like the slaughtering of chickens, is not interstate commerce and therefore Congress has no power to regulate it. On this point the Supreme Court divides six to three, exactly the same line-up as in the NRA decision, with Justices Brandeis, Stone and Cardozo in the minority. The majority opinion held that the regulation of wages, hours and conditions of labor in the soft coal industry is a local matter to be settled locally. It also held that the law delegated legislative authority unconstitutionally.

The Court also ruled against another major feature of the Guffey Act, the taxation provision. The law provided for an excise tax of 15 per cent of the total value of coal mined, to be paid by the mine operators; but operators who signed the soft coal code were to receive a rebate of 90 per cent of this tax. The Supreme Court held that this was an improper and unconstitutional use of the taxing power to impose a penalty upon operators who refused to be coerced into signing up.

Annulment Expected

The annulment of the Guffey Act by the Supreme Court was not unexpected. It was commonly referred to in Washington as "The Little NRA." In principle it differed in no way from the National Recovery Act, and serious doubts as to its constitutionality were held by leaders of both parties in Congress at the time of its enactment. It was pending at the time of the NRA decision last Summer, and the tendency then was to drop it because it so clearly seemed to be exactly parallel to NRA. It was at that critical moment that the President wrote to Representative Hill, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, expressing the hope that the Committee would not let any doubts of the constitutionality of the Guffey Bill prevent its being reported to the House for action.

The real reason behind the bill's passage was the threat of the United Mine Workers of a general coal strike on September 15, last year, unless Congress passed some law that would compel the mine owners and operators to accede to the demand of the union for shorter hours and higher pay. There was no doubt that the miners were desperate and that they meant business. There was talk of riots extensive enough to be called rebellion among the Pennsylvania miners unless something was done and done quickly.

Excise Tax Refund?

Many large mine owners who refused to sign the code paid the excise tax under protest, at the same time starting legal proceedings to have the law declared unconstitutional. About $700,000 of these taxes collected or deposited in court may have to be refunded.

Chief Justice Hughes, while concurring in the majority opinion of the Court, wrote an individual opinion in which he held that some features of the Guffey Law might be constitutional if they could be separated from the unconstitutional provisions of it.

Reestablishment Decision

On the same day that the Guffey Act decision was handed down, the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia handed down a decision that the Rural Reestablishment Administration, created by the President under the Works Progress Administration, with Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell at its head, was an unconstitutional delegation of power under the WPA Act. While this decision is not final, and will be carried to the Supreme Court, it is notable as the first judicial reversal of any of the applications of the $4,800,000,000 Works Relief fund which Congress gave to the President early last year to use in his own discretion.

Naturally, the question which everybody in Washington is asking is as to the political effects of these new anti-administration Court decisions. Coming as they did, almost on the eve of the party conventions, it is to be expected that every possible effort to utilize them for party ends will be made by the Republicans.

G.O.P. Harmony

Republican leaders are taking more confidence than they were a few weeks ago. There has been a decided stiffening of Republican morale in the past fortnight. How much Bruce Barton's selection as the party's publicity adviser has had to do with this is debatable, but most observers believe that his influence has been considerable.

Loss is being heard now of the possibility of Senator Borah's throw-

Health Service

OF THE
Canadian Medical Association

Edited by

GRANT FLEMING, M.D., ASSOCIATE SECRETARY

OUT OF ORDER

Health has been defined as that condition which we enjoy when all parts of the body are working together in harmony. The human body possesses a remarkable capacity to adjust itself, both within and without, to changing conditions, continuing all the while to function properly.

At times the orderly working of the body is lost. It may be said that the body is then out of order—harmony no longer exists. A broken bone in the arm means that the arm is out of order; it cannot function. Other disorders are usually not quite so obvious as are those arising from a broken bone. Most disorders express themselves in symptoms which draw attention to the presence of the disorder. Symptoms are always due to some cause. Relief from the symptoms may be secured, but unless the disorder which is the cause of the symptoms is removed, the treatment is not really effective and the symptoms will likely return.

One reason why the body can adjust itself to changing conditions lies in the reserve power which it possesses. We may lose a considerable part of our kidney and our lung tissues, and what remains will be able to do the work of these parts. Under such circumstances there is, however, no real reserve upon which to fall back, and great care must be taken to avoid placing any extra demand on the parts.

The continued and repeated exhaustion, by overwork, of the body reserves, through poor habits of living, insufficient rest periods, and little exercise, fresh air and sunshine, leads to a collapse of the reserves. Loss of health may not mean actual disease, but rather a ing a monkey wrench into the party machinery. There appears to be a more general acceptance among party leaders of Gov. Landon, who is now regarded as almost certain to be nominated on the third or fourth ballot at Cleveland, with the good will of all of the important factors in the party behind him.

Former President Hoover's public statement that he is not and will not be a candidate for the nomination cleared the political air, while his declaration that he is not opposed to any candidate is taken to mean that he will put no obstacles in the way of Gov. Landon's nomination.

Senator Vandenberg is now practically the only possible compromise choice in case Landon does not gain the nomination but political strategists are suggesting that it would strengthen the ticket to nominate him for Vice-President, with an eye to 1940 in case of a Republican defeat this year.

Richard Brinsley Sheridan, Irish dramatist and politician was one day much annoyed by a fellow member of the House of Commons, who kept crying out every minute "Hear, hear!" In describing a political contemporary, Sheridan took occasion to exclaim with great emphasis: "Where, where shall we find a more foolish knave or a more knavish fool than he?" "Hear, hear!" was shouted by the troublesome member. Sheridan turned around and thinking him for the prompt informative, set down amid a general roar of laughter—Frederick Saunders.

BRUCE BARTON Says

Everybody Has Some Vice

Everyone has some secret vice, and mine is buying newspapers. I take three in the morning and three at night, and if you ask how this leaves me time to do any work I will reveal my formula. I do not spend a great deal of time with the long articles at the top of the pages. These deal with the European situation, political speeches and evanescent scandals, to all of which I have developed a certain old-age immunity.

But I read with unflagging joy all the little items. Here one can observe the eternal pagan of human ingenuity, folly, frivolity, and unexpectedness. I note, for instance, that a scientist has grafted the hind legs of a salamander onto the front part of his body and put its front legs where its hind legs were before. Another professor has succeeded in causing a rooster to develop the characteristics of a hen, which he thinks is something to crow about, a third savant finds that he can compel tadpoles to become frogs much more rapidly than when they are left to their own inclinations.

Here, also, I make the acquaintance of a poet who is fined one cent for calling a county commissioner a sacred bull, the jury supplying the penny. At one fell swoop 17,000 Kentucky Colonels, myself included, are shorn of their gaudy titles; a judge who fined his wife two dollars for violating parking regulations wakes up the next morning to discover himself two dollars shy; and a poor citizen shoots himself because he is tired of trying to escape from an installment-purchase salesman.

The late Mr. Talleyrand said that when he should come to the end of life he wanted to die with a newspaper in his hand. I echo his wish.

Examples Are Best Sermons

Two acquaintances were talking about a man who used to be both rich and opulent. One said: "Jim is nice; it must be the depression. He didn't go busted, of course, but he got a good thorough cleaning. I think it has made him more human."

To which the other replied: "There's another factor. In the past five years his children have married and set up their own homes. Back in the years of his big prosperity they were beginning to assert themselves, and he was forever fighting and fuming, trying to run their lives, making himself miserable whenever he discovered he could not. Now, at last, he has surrendered. Somewhat to his astonishment, they have all turned out to be pretty successful."

A third man said: "That story hits the spot with me. I recently made the discovery that I was in danger of alienating my children because I wanted so much to have them just right. What woke me up was a remark by my nine-year-old daughter as we were riding to town. After we had travelled about a mile she looked up at me in surprise, and said, 'Well, Daddy, where's the sermon?'"

The temptation to try to lead our children's lives for them is almost inescapable. We are so conscious of the miseries brought on us by our own shortcomings, so anxious to save them from the same penalties. Yet most of our talk is useless. Example is about the only power that really counts.

If the youngsters knew the quotation they probably would fling it at us often—Emerson's famous remark: "What you are thunders so loud I can't hear what you say."

NEWS & VIEWS OF TOWN AND DISTRICT

BORN.—To Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Kitchen, of Wainwright, at the Wainwright municipal hospital on June 4th, a girl.

BORN.—To Mr. and Mrs. T. Schock, of Wainwright, at the Wainwright municipal hospital on June 7th, a boy.

BORN.—To Mr. and Mrs. G. McLean, of Fabyan, at the Wainwright municipal hospital on June 9th, a boy.

Following a small fire at the refinery north of town, Mr. J. Meikie-John is in hospital suffering from badly burned hands, face and head, and we wish him speedy recovery.

A rumour which gained strength in town over the week-end that Mr. R. G. Robertson, who formerly resided here had died has been found to be entirely unfounded.

Mr. Frank Shaban of Hope Valley met with an accident while using a welding machine last week. He was brought to the hospital where he received treatment for his eyes, and has happily now regained his sight.

"Les Miserables" Based on Victor Hugo Novel

At the Elite theatre this week-end will be showing one of the season's most outstanding pictures "Les Miserables" with Frederick March and Charles Laughton taking leading roles.

Fundamentally it is the character drama of Jean Valjean and Javert. It graphically establishes these characters in a manner to make lucid all that is to follow. Valjean is sentenced to the galleys for stealing to feed hungry mouths. Javert is sworn into the gendarmes, dedicating himself to uphold the law, tempered neither by mercy or justice.

Then in bold strokes it plunges into the core of the Victor Hugo novel. Valjean in the galleys, more animal than man, first brought to Javert's attention when he lifts a beam that might crush out a fellow convict's life. Sentence completed, Valjean, still a shunned animal, comes to the home of Bishop Bienvenue. Amazed at the kind treatment, he stays again, and then in one of the picture's most moving sequences, learns from the sympathetic priest the lesson "It is better to give than take" that changes his whole life.

Valjean becomes M. Madeline, successful manufacturer, high-minded citizen, chosen to be town magistrate. His path and Javert's cross again as the latter is assigned as his inspector of police. Madeline befriends Fantine; takes her child, Cossette, from a life of heartless cruelty, and when her mother dies makes her girl his ward.

As Cossette grows to maturity, she falls in love with Marius, student revolutionary leader. Javert who lives for the day when he will see Valjean again, is assigned to learn who is financing the anti-government forces and again their trails cross. Suspense reaches its most intense moments, when Valjean attempting to aid the wounded Marius to escape from the trailing Javert, hides in the Paris sewers.

Don't forget the dates of this amazing picture—Friday and Saturday, June 12 and 13.
